The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) seeks public comment on its Proposed Remedial Action Plan for addressing elevated levels of zinc at the First Piedmont Corporation Rock Quarry Site located in Danville in Pittsylvania County, Virginia. The proposed plan consists of soil excavation; backfilling; wetland restoration, where needed; institutional controls; and sediment and erosion control monitoring.

Before arriving at this point in the cleanup process, The Potentially-Responsible Parties conducted a detailed study of the on-site soil and sediment. EPA is using information gathered during that study in this proposed plan.

On August 12, 2013, EPA published in the Danville Register Bee newspaper a notice of the availability of the proposed plan and administrative record and invited the public to submit comments to EPA beginning on that day. However, following the publication of the notice, EPA discovered that the Administrative Record File for this proposed plan was incomplete. During the last week of August, 2013, EPA expects to complete the Administrative Record File and publish again in the Danville Register Bee newspaper a notice of the availability of the proposed plan and administrative record and to initiate a 30-day public comment period beginning on the date of publication. All comments submitted from August 12, 2013, the date of the original notice, through the end of the public comment period will be considered by EPA in deciding a final remedy and do not need to be re-submitted.
